Introduction to the Text

"Let the days do as they please" comes from the collected poems ascribed to Muḥammad ibn Idrīs al-Shāfiʿī, better known as al-Imām al-Shāfiʿī (d.820). We have no extant manuscripts from his period that include his poetic works, which appeared in various anthologies since the Middle Ages. Only relatively recently, at the turn of the twentieth century, was the poetry ascribed to him published in a single dīwān, or poetry collection. These poems were penned by different hands at different points in history. In the preface to his second edition of the Dīwān, Dr. Mujāhid Bahjat notes that the majority of poems ascribed to al-Shāfiʿī may be ascribed to other poets or are otherwise unconfirmed as his own; he traces only twelve directly to him, whereas a given edition may include over 160 poems and poetic fragments [Bahjat, 3-4, 19-20].

Although primarily recognized as the namesake to one of the four main jurisprudential schools (or madhāhib, sg. madhʿhab) in Sunni Islam, al-Imām al-Shāfiʿī equally distinguished himself as a master of language and adab (belles-lettres). Growing up, this descendant of the prophetic line of the Banū Hāshim tribe lived among the Hudhayl—a clan known for the purity of their Arabic—in order to immerse himself in the study of the language. This training made his reputation as a poet and poetic critic. Years later, in Baghdad, the famed philologist and grammarian al-Aṣmaʿī (d.828) would visit al-Shāfiʿī to take Hudhalī poetry from him. As did all eminent scholars who sought him out (there were many), he marveled at his double command of language and poetry.

al-Imām al-Shāfiʿī was born in Gaza in 767. With the death of his father, he and his mother moved to Mecca two years later. His pursuit of knowledge (or ṭalab al-ʿilm) brought him at a young age to Medina, where he studied ḥadīth (prophetic narrations) and fiqh (Islamic law) under al-Imām Mālik ibn Anas until the latter's death in 795. He then accepted a post in Yemen as governor of Najran, although a revolt in 803 prematurely ended his political career when it led to his arrest and summoning to the court of the Abbasid caliph Hārūn al-Rashīd (d.809) in al-Raqqah, a city in Syria. There, he would meet the jurist Muḥammad al-Shaybānī (d.805), who helped secure his acquittal. Under al-Imām al-Shaybānī's tutelage, al-Shāfiʿī relocated to Baghdad. (Among al-Shāfiʿī's most important students there was al-Imām Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal (d.855)). al-Shāfiʿī would make one more major move in 814 for Egypt, where he continued to study and teach a variety of subjects, primarily jurisprudence, until his death in 820 at the age of 54.

The verses ascribed to al-Shāfiʿī probably reflect a lifetime's worth of occasional compositions and pronouncements, and certainly reflect their author's erudition, fine manners, and familiarity with classical meters. Precise and brief, the poetry employs a range of sophisticated rhetorical strategies nevertheless, from ṭibāq (contrariety) to bayān (eloquence), to jinās (paronomasia), to additional instances of badʿ (ingenuity)—stylistically unique tropes and schemes [Bahjat, pp. 29-37, 42-43]. Thematically, the poems touch on the matters of wisdom literature, including personal comportment, friendship, the pursuit of knowledge, and the cultivation of virtues.

“Let the days do as they please” | “دع الأيام تفعل ما تشاء”

Let the days do as they please, And take heart with what destiny decreed.		وطب نفساً بما حكم القضاء دع الأيام تفعل ما تشاء
Don't sweat the nights' emergencies; The world's afflictions lack perpetuity.		ولا تجزع لحادثة الليالي فما لحوادث الدنيا بقاء
Be a man indifferent to fear, Of noble, loyal nature.	5	وكن رجلاً على الأهوال جلداً وشيمتك المروءة والوفاء
Should your faults accrue among creation, And you'd like to drape them,		وإن كثرت عيوبك في البرايا وسرّك أن يكون لها غطاء
Drape them with generosity, for every fault Generosity enshrouds, as the saying goes.	10	تستر بالسخاء فكل عيب يغطيه كما قيل السخا
Never show foes a fault; Their schadenfreude's a sure misfortune.		ولا تر للأعداء قط ذلاً فإن شماتة الأعداء بلاء
Expect no bounty from the miser; Jehennem waters not the parched.		ولا ترج السّماحة من بخل فما في النار للظمان ما
Unhurriedness will not diminish your provisions, Nor will overexertion increase them.	15	ورزقك ليس ينقصه التّأني وليس يزيد في الرزق العناء
Despondency passes, as does joy; Neither poverty nor affluence are on you.		ولا حزن يدوم ولا سرور ولا بؤس عليك ولا رخاء
If you possess a satisfied heart, You own the world.		إذا ما كنت ذا قلب قنوع فأنت ومالك الدنيا سوا
On whomever Death descends with its appointment, No earth can shelter, no sky.	20	ومن نزلت بساحته المنايا فلا أرض تقيه ولا سما
Allāh's earth is wide. However, When fate strikes the space contracts.		وأرض الله واسعة ولكن إذا نزل القضا ضاق الفضاء
Let the days betray every age, For death knows no antidote.	25	دع الأيام تغدر كل حين فما يغني عن الموت الدوا
